

Thanks for the save!

A few weeks ago, I had asked for someone to throw me a rope. Thank goodness someone did! I was drowning in life.

Gina Riggs' Story

"I have always been told that I have a heart of a saint and that I have made a difference to so many people's lives. I've been told I have so much to be proud of. I started my young life out working with others, the elderly and then my true calling, individuals with intellectual disabilities. I have never truly had a very good self-esteem to the point I thought I was never going to be anything. Sometime having a hard time asking for things in a store.

As I got older and working more with special needs I found that God not only put me in this direction to help them but to also have them help me. I can honestly say as they were growing, so was I. I slowly learned it's ok to be different, it's ok if you're not college material, just do the best you know how, and God will take care of the rest. They taught me love, innocents and the most important you are going to be ok.

I still struggle with self-esteem but I'm able to deal with it better. It is truly a blessing from God when you help what I call Gods living Angel's through a hard task and the joy they show when they get it done, the love they give you for helping them and not realizing they also helped you.

Do I have a heart of gold? I am now proud to say yes; have I done a great job and made a difference to someone's life? Yes, I think so, but I do not take all the credit. Through my job and the individuals I work with and Gods help I have become who I am today and neither one of us are finished growing and learning."

My sincerest thanks to Gina for her submission and willingness to share her story with all of you. May you be blessed by it.
